

Monday 8 May
Middleton Railway

RAILWAY 69

Another bank holiday, and a wet, horrible one at that. We drove north to Hannah and found her at the veg patch at the pub. Then I left her and J to join the very damp Coronation celebrations in the village while I drove into Leeds and had a ride on the Middleton Railway. I last came here in 2019 when the place was heaving - today it was not. I had a ride up the branch, a walk round the bluebell woods in Middleton Park, and a ride back again. They have a good little museum, and I had tea and cake in the café. I drove back via the Oxfam Bookshop in Headingley and a Pets at home. A sleep, an Indian, and home.

