Having stayed up until 0028 (or thereabouts) - Amy arriving not long before midnight - we did not wake early on Sunday morning. Amy needed to return to her family, then Hannah decided I needed a steam train ride. We drove to Quorn and J took up residence in the Butler Henderson café. Hannah and I had a ride to Leicester and back. Very pleasant, just annoyed I can't colour the top bit of the line in.

On Monday Michael Hampel called in, and Alex and Christina came over. After Michael had gone Alex and Christina drove me to Loughborough so we could have a train ride. Loughborough is a beautiful station, and now has a disabled lift to platform level. We had a bacon butty in the bar. Leicester and back - with the sun setting en route. Rothley station looked gorgeous with the gas lights.
